The Kiwi Fossil Hunter's Handbook

James Crampton & Marianna Terezow

Children are fascinated by dinosaurs, and love the idea of the fossils they have left behind. New Zealand has a rich fossil record which is accessible to the amateur fossil-hunter in locations around New Zealand, including shells and plant remains as well as the bones, teeth and other remnants of ancient reptiles, birds and fish.

This handy pack-sized guide features 30 accessible locations around the country where kids and their families can find fossils. Each location contains specific information on where to look and what to look for, as well as the geological background and other details of each site, and colour images of fossils that could be found there.

What the sites look like now is supplemented by colourful mini-posters showing reconstructions of New Zealand in the past by well-known artist Dave Gunson. The book has been to coincide with the opening of the 'Dead Precious' touring exhibition at Te Papa, which will run until the Easter school holidays.

The Parihaka Album: Lest We Forget

Rachel Buchanan

'A photo album doesn't tell the whole story of a family and this book doesn't tell the whole story of Parihaka. Rather, it is a collection of snapshots, a patchwork quilt, a scrapbook, a mongrel record my own efforts to understand one of the most important and disturbing events in New Zealand history - the 1881 invasion of Parihaka - and its powerful, complicated legacy.' Rachel Buchanan.

The Parihaka Album: Lest We Forget blends the personal and the historical. It tracks the author Rachel Buchanan's discovery of her family's links with Parihaka and her Maori and Pakeha ancestor's roles in the early days of the city that is now Wellington.

Domestic Violence: Intersectionality and Culturally Competent Practice

Lettie Lockhart & Fran Danis

Experts working with twelve unique groups of domestic abuse survivors provide the latest research on their populations and use a case study approach to demonstrate culturally sensitive intervention strategies.

Chapters address African Americans, Native Americans, Latinas, Asian and Pacific Island communities, persons with disabilities, immigrants, refugees, women in later life, LGBT survivors, and military couples, as well as domestic violence in rural environments and among teens, and the role of religion.

This textbook opens with an overview of intersectionality, culturally competent practice, and domestic violence and basic practice strategies, such as universal screening, risk assessment, and safety planning. Subsequent chapters are written by collaborative teams of research and practice experts and cover the latest research on specific populations.

Illustrative case studies demonstrate generalist social work practice, including how to develop respectful collaborative working relationships aimed at defining issues from the survivor's perspective; collecting and assessing data that focuses on the strengths of individuals, families, communities, and service delivery systems; goal setting and contracting; identifying culturally specific interventions; implementing culturally appropriate courses of action that intervene at appropriate system levels; participating in community level strategies; and advocating for improved policies and adequate funding at (American) local, state, and federal levels.

Public Relations Campaigns

Mark Sheehan & Robina Xavier

This book is designed to guide current and aspiring Public Relations professionals through the campaign development and implementation process.

It illustrates the application of planning theory to real life scenarios to present a practical approach for planning a successful campaign.

The first half of the book provides the foundations on which successful campaigns are built: theory, research and evaluation. This leads into an exploration of a series of contemporary campaigns that highlight specialist areas of public relations practice in Australia and New Zealand.

This provides an inside view, mapping the elements of the campaign step by step and enables an understanding of how a successful campaign is built.

There is also a focus on campaign analysis, comparing and contrasting competing interests and an exploration of campaign impact.

Nonproliferation Norms: Why States Choose Nuclear Restraint

Maria Rost Rublee

What can be learned from countries that opted out of the arms race. Too often, our focus on the relative handful of countries with nuclear weapons keeps us from asking an important question: Why do so many more states not have such weapons? More important, what can we learn from these examples of nuclear restraint?

Maria Rost Rublee argues that in addition to understanding a state's security environment, we must appreciate the social forces that influence how states conceptualise the value of nuclear weapons. Much of what Rublee says also applies to other weapons of mass destruction, as well as national security decision making in general.

The nuclear nonproliferation movement has created an international social environment that exerts a variety of normative pressures on how state elites and policymakers think about nuclear weapons. Within a social psychology framework, Rublee examines decision making about nuclear weapons in five case studies: Japan, Egypt, Libya, Sweden, and Germany.

In each case, Rublee considers the extent to which nuclear forbearance resulted from persuasion (genuine transformation of preferences), social conformity (the desire to maximise social benefits and/or minimise social costs, without a change in underlying preferences), or identification (the desire or habit of following the actions of an important other).

The book offers bold policy prescriptions based on a sharpened knowledge of the many ways we transmit and process nonproliferation norms. The social mechanisms that encourage nonproliferation - and the regime that created them - must be preserved and strengthened, Rublee argues, for without them states that have exercised nuclear restraint may rethink their choices.

Maria Rost Rublee is a lecturer with the University of Auckland and a former intelligence officer with the Defence Intelligence Agency - USA.

ART

A Vital Practice

Spark Studio

This inspiring publication provides a documentation and outline of the orientation of practice and philosophies that underpin Spark Studio projects and wider studio work implemented through series of projects funded by the Tertiary Education Commission.

The projects provide an innovative and unique blend of visual arts learning and creative expression; integrating art making methodologies with person centred self development processes.

This book presents and celebrates the experience and works of Spark Studio students in their art making process. It features many of the artworks created throughout the programmes, and artist statements which authentically record each person's experience.

Spark Studio is a creative space in St. Lukes in Auckland, offering an innovative art programme for adults with various disabilities. The sessions provide a learning process in visual arts education especially orientated to the requirements and circumstances of our artists; they also promote and encourage self-development through the vehicle of creative expression.

Blood Men

Paul Cleave

Edward Hunter is a family man with a beautiful wife and daughter, a great job, a bright future, and a very dark past. Edward's father is a man of blood. He's been in jail for twenty years and he's never coming out.

Edward has struggled his entire life to put that all behind him, but it's hard, it's hard when everybody knows you're the son of a serial killer. Then, a week out from Christmas, Eddie's world is turned upside-down. Suddenly he's going to need the help of his father, a man he hasn't seen since he was a boy.

Is Edward destined to be just like his father, to become a man of blood?

Paul Cleave lives in his home city of Christchurch where all his four novels are set. In 2007 The Cleaner made the shortlist for the Ned Kelly Award for Best Fiction.

Lost in the Bush: Keeping yourself Safe in New Zealand's Great Outdoors

Lindy Kelly & Pauline Whimp

The must have junior guide to survival in the New Zealand bush. Would you know what to do if you were lost in the bush?

Sam loves the amazing bush, but he knows he's not to go into the bush alone. When Tuffy the dog escapes, though, Sam rushes in to save him ...and before long, Sam realizes he's lost! Bit by bit, Sam remembers all the rules for survival that Grandpa Tua has taught him on their walks in the bush, and now puts them into practice. Will this be enough?

Lindy Kelly, with the help of New Zealand Land Search and Rescue, sets out the basic rules you should follow to help prevent getting lost. There are also guidelines on how to prepare for a tramp, and, if you are lost, how to keep yourself safe until help arrives. Fun activities will help you remember the safety messages. With great illustrations by Pauline Whimp.

Timmy the Tug

Jim Downer & Ted Hughes

Ted Hughes was one of the greatest poets of the 20th century. Now, over ten years after his death, Thames & Hudson is publishing a children's poem by him that had been lost for over fifty years.

Written in the mid-1950s to accompany his friend Jim Downer's story about Timmy the Tug, the poem recounts Timmy's escape from his moorings and subsequent adventures on the high seas. Downer's illustrations are a charming focus to this enchanting tale that, besides appealing to children everywhere, is set to be one of the biggest literary events of the year.

M is for Metal! The Loudest Alphabet Book on Earth

Paul McNeil & Barry Divola

Imagine Dr. Seuss crossed with Spinal Tap and The Simpsons and you're in the ballpark.

Appealing to children's sense of the absurd, plus tickling grown-ups' funny bones with in-jokes about rock stars and their foibles, M is for Metal! is one of those books where parents and kids can look at the same page together and both laugh, but not necessarily at the same thing.

Filled with amazingly illustrated, yet educational, alphabet rhymes, these books are for parents as much as child.
