The Cage

Lloyd Jones

The much anticipated new novel from the acclaimed author of the award-winning Mister Pip, this is a powerful allegorical tale about humanity and dignity and the ease with which we can justify brutality.

Two mysterious strangers turn up at a hotel in a small country town. Where have they come from? Who are they? What catastrophe are they fleeing? The townspeople want answers, but the strangers are unable to speak of their trauma. Before long, wary hospitality shifts to suspicion and fear and the care of the men slides into appalling cruelty.

Lloyd Jones's fable-like story The Cage is a profound and unsettling novel. (336 pages – Penguin 2017)

The Ngatiwai Mandate Inquiry Report (WAI 2561)

Waitangi Tribunal

The Ngatiwai Mandate Inquiry Report found the Crown breached the principles of the Treaty of Waitangi when it recognised the mandate of the Ngatiwai Trust Board to negotiate Treaty claims on behalf of iwi in October 2015.

The report came after 10 claimant groups applied for an urgent inquiry into the Crown's recognition of that mandate. Urgency hearings were held at Whangarei's Toll Stadium in October last year and in Wellington in December. Claimant Mylie George of Ngatiwai ki Whangaruru said whanau welcomed the report.

Tu Mai te Rangi! Report on the Crown and Disproportionate Reoffending Rates (WAI 2540)

Waitangi Tribunal

Tu Mai te Rangi! Report on the Crown and Disproportionate Reoffending Rates is the outcome of an urgent Waitangi Tribunal inquiry into a claim brought by retired senior probation officer, Tom Hemopo, concerning Crown actions and policies in reducing the high and disproportionate rate of Maori reoffending. The report examines allegations that the Crown failed to make a long-term commitment to reducing the high rate of Maori reoffending relative to non-Maori and that, through the Department of Corrections, it acted inconsistently with Treaty principles by having no Maori-specific target, strategy, or budget to reduce Maori reoffending rates.

PACIFIC

Our Heritage, the Ocean: Only the Word Survives: The Samoa Observer Tusitala Short Stories

Stephanie Wynne

Started as an initiative in 2015 by the Samoa Observer Editor in Chief, Gatoaitale Savea Sano Malifa, a noted author and poet, Malifa wanted to provide a forum for Pacific writers to tell the stories of their own lives and to share issues and ideas which were important to them.

The second annual Samoa Observer Tusitala Short Story Competition in 2016 also attracted some outstanding entries. These original stories are set around the Pacific – in American Samoa, Australia, Fiji, Hawaii, New Zealand, Papua New Guinea, and Samoa, with one even further afield. 'Stories of superstition and courage, migration and old age, tales set in the past, present, and future. While the plots are diverse, many have the same underlying message: we need our family and each other, said an early reviewer of the collection.'

This second publication of the best stories from 2016 is entitled Only the Word Survives.

Mobilities of Return: Pacific Perspectives

John Taylor & Helen Lee

In recent decades, the term mobility has emerged as a defining paradigm within the humanities. For scholars engaged in the multidisciplinary topics and perspectives now often embraced by the term Pacific Studies, it has been a much more longstanding and persistent concern. Even so, specific questions regarding mobilities of return (that is, the movement of people back to places that are designated, however ambiguously or ambivalently, as home) have tended to take a back seat within more recent discussions of mobility, transnationalism and migration.

This volume situates return mobility as a starting point for understanding the broader context and experience of human mobility, community and identity in the Pacific region and beyond. Through diverse case studies spanning the Pacific region, it demonstrates the extent to which the prospect and practice of returning home, or of navigating returns between multiple homes, is a central rather than peripheral component of contemporary Pacific Islander mobilities and identities everywhere.

Solomon Islanders in World War II: An Indigenous Perspective

Anna Kwai

The Solomon Islands campaign of World War II has been the subject of many published historical accounts. Most of these accounts present an outsider perspective with limited reference to the contribution of indigenous Solomon Islanders as coastwatchers, scouts, carriers and labourers under the Royal Australian Navy and other Allied military units. Where islanders are mentioned, they are represented as loyal helpers.

The nature of local contributions in the war and their impact on islander perceptions are more complex than that which has been represented in these outsiders perspectives. Islander encounters with white American troops enabled self-awareness of racial relationships and inequality under the colonial administration, which sparked struggles towards recognition and political autonomy that emerged in parts of the British Solomon Islands Protectorate in the post-war period. Exploitation of post-war military infrastructure by the colonial administration laid the foundation for later sociopolitical upheaval experienced by the country.

In the aftermath of the 1998 crisis, the supposed unity and pride that prevailed among islanders during the war has been seen as an avenue whereby different ethnic identities can be unified. This national unification process entailed the construction of the Pride of our Nation monument that aims to restore the pride and identity of Solomon Islanders.

Safeguard Health & Safety Handbook 2018

Mike Cosman, Michael Tooma, Ann Butler, Craig Marriott & Rachael Schmidt-McCleave

The Safeguard Health & Safety Handbook 2018 is a new, completely essential guide for those at the forefront of health and safety in New Zealand.

Written in plain English, it is current to 1 September 2017 and brings together analysis of the legislation, practical advice, tools and case notes to provide readers with a reliable reference source and quality guidance on meeting their responsibilities under the Health and Safety at Work Act 2015.

The book starts with an introduction to health and safety and an overview of the key concepts of the Act. It follows with an in-depth explanation of duties, then moves on to leadership, tools, health and safety regulations and enforcement options. The last chapters include a comprehensive set of health and safety case notes, as well as guidance on accident compensation and the growing area of occupational health. As an added advantage the book is fully indexed so key words and phrases can be pinpointed throughout the text.

Make sure you follow the correct processes and attain compliance and best practice in every health and safety circumstance by investing in the Safeguard Health and Safety Handbook 2018.

This resource is a must-have for PCBUs, officers, unions, site managers, health and safety representatives, consultants and managers in small to medium businesses and organisations.

EDUCATION

Understanding Enduring Ideas in Education: A Response to Those Who Just Want to Be a Teacher

Carol Mutch & Jennifer Tatebe

The journey towards becoming a teacher involves engaging with a range of theoretical and pedagogical knowledge, as well as fieldwork experiences. This edited collection is a response to recurring student feedback about the struggle to grasp the philosophical and political aspects of teaching and learning.

For some, encountering broad open-ended questions about the nature and purpose of education is confronting. Chapters have been organised around three philosophical traditions: progressive, liberal, and socially critical perspectives. The exploration of each philosophical tradition is complemented by personal reflections of academics for whom a particular philosophical view has influenced their development as scholars, researchers, and educators.

This book is essential reading for teachers, educators, parents, and community members interested in understanding how enduring philosophical ideas can help us make sense of contemporary educational issues. The book raises key questions about the purpose of education, the nature of knowledge, and beliefs and values about teaching and learning.

The authors present education as a site of competing and often conflicting ideas to which there may be no firm answers to these questions. In this regard, the book presents philosophical thinking as a deep, on-going exploration of the relationship between education and society. By providing further questions for discussion, the authors seek to promote further reflection and critical thinking on education and its role in society.

The book will also be of interest to policy makers, government officials and teacher educators.

10 Mindframes for Visible Learning: Teaching for Success

John Hattie & Klaus Zierer

The original Visible Learning research concluded that one of the most important influencers of student achievement is how teachers think about learning and their own role.

In 10 Mindframes for Visible Learning, John Hattie and Klaus Zierer define the ten behaviours or mindframes that teachers need to adopt in order to maximise student success. These powerful mindframes, which should underpin every action in schools, are founded on the principle that teachers are evaluators, change agents, learning experts and seekers of feedback who are constantly engaged with dialogue and challenge. This practical guide, which includes questionnaires, scenarios, checklists and exercises, will show any school exactly how to implement Hattie's mindframes to maximise success.

John Hattie was born in Timaru, New Zealand, and has been Professor of Education and Director of the Melbourne Education Research Institute at the University of Melbourne, Australia, since March 2011. He was previously Professor of Education at the University of Auckland. Prior to his move to the University of Melbourne, Hattie was a member of the independent advisory group reporting to the New Zealand's Minister of Education on the national standards in reading, writing and maths for all primary school children in New Zealand. Klaus Zeiger is Professor of Education at the University of Augsburg, Germany.

Promising Practices in Indigenous Teacher Education

Paul Whitinui, Carmen Rodriguez de France & Onowa Mclvor

This book provides a comprehensive overview of navigating the on-going systemic challenges, hardships, and problems facing many indigenous teacher education programmes today, helping to foster a commitment to developing quality indigenous teacher education programmes that are sustainable, distinctive and excellent.

However, despite a growing cadre of indigenous peoples working in teacher education, there is still a noticeable gap between the uptake of what is being taught in conventional teacher education programmes and how this translates to what we see student teachers doing in the classroom.

By promoting a greater appreciation for the inclusion of culturally relevant practices in teacher education, the book aims to breathe new life into the hopes, dreams, and aspirations of indigenous teacher education programmes moving forward.

Dr. Whitinui is an indigenous Maori scholar from New Zealand and an assistant professor at the School of Exercise Science, Physical and Health Education (EPHE) based at the University of Victoria's Faculty of Education in British Columbia, Canada.

Dr Carmen Rodriguez de France is an assistant professor in the University of Victoria's Faculty of Education. Dr. Onowa Mclvor is an assistant professor and the director of Indigenous Education in the University of Victoria's Faculty of Education.

Back from the Brink

Bill Blaikie

In 2004, Lieutenant Colonel William Blaikie shipped out to Afghanistan to head up a team dedicated to rebuilding the country after the war. As part of the New Zealand Defence Force, his skills lay in intelligence and communications – his mission was to form a team, develop and implement plans to work with the United States and Coalition partners to help get Afghanistan back on its feet.

Bill experienced situations that were beyond tense, often facing life and death situations and decision making that required deep and quick thinking, based on not always having enough information at hand.

On his return home to New Zealand, his journey in coping with Post-Traumatic Stress Disorder (PTSD) began, and the nightmares were not limited to sleep time. Everything has remained at life and death levels for Bill, and this book details how he and his wife Nancy have worked through suicide attempts, getting help, and finding answers to what is an epidemic level challenge for military personnel everywhere. 'No amount of training can prepare you for what happens in your head after the uniforms are off and the guns are packed away.'

So Many Islands

Nicholas Laughlin & Folami Imoja

So Many Islands brings together stories from the distant shores of the island communities in the Caribbean, Mediterranean, Indian Ocean and Pacific Ocean. Giving voice to their challenges and triumphs, these writers paint a vibrant portrait of what it is like to live, love and lose the things most precious to them on the small islands they call home. This enchanting collection will transport you to Marakei, 'the women's island', where a female statue stands guard at each compass point, and introduce you to colourful characters like Leno Humphrey, a small-time cricketer from Saint Vincent and the Grenadines who buys his own trophies to take back to his wife. Voicing global issues such as climate change and nuclear testing in the Pacific – a fight close to the heart of these precariously poised islands – to petty politics and the gaps between generations, readers everywhere will find universal connections with these worlds and words.
